Landscape Painter and Photographer

Julia is a Listowel dweller, born and raised, and has had a fascination with the natural world since infancy. She is a third generation nature photographer and has been taking photos since the age of 8, under the experienced guidance of her father and grandfather.

For years Julia has been looking at clouds and thinking 'someone ought to paint that.' Due to the pandemic and an unexpectedly increased amount of free time, Julia gave up waiting for someone else to paint it and decided to do it herself. It has led to experimentation with colours, brushes, palette knives, and painting techniques over a period of seven months. The bulk of her paintings are based off of photographs she has taken in her many adventures in Southern Ontario.

Her future painting plans are to do more on site paintings, painting less from photos and more outdoors. She also intends to go to St. Jerome's University for a degree in English Literature.
